Forecast For Northern Ireland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Friday 12 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Scattered showers today, longer spells of rain by evening.

Today:
Sunny intervals and a few showers, occasionally heavy with some snow on hills. Thickening cloud will bring some persistent rain from the west later in the afternoon. Brisk westerly winds easing and backing southwesterly. Maximum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Tonight:
A mostly cloudy evening and night with rain at times, occasionally heavy. Becoming somewhat drier and clearer later in the night with a touch of ground developing in places. Minimum temperature 1 deg C (34 deg F).

Saturday:
Some bright or sunny intervals and occasional showers, these briefly heavy especially in the north. Feeling chilly in the brisk northwesterly winds. Maximum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Cloudy on Sunday with rain for a time. Chance of a little light rain on Monday in places. Overnight rain soon clearing on Tuesday then dry and sunny.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.